Book 3

Proposition 4

In a circle, straight-lines are said to be equally far from the center when the perpendiculars drawn to them from the center are equal.